I would like to go on record as being opposed to the Yucca Mt. repository site. It's unsafe for workers both loading and unloading, roadways, railroads, water airquality and etc. Our hazmat crews are untrained and to far apart for quick responce. Our roads are, t safe for regular delivery trucks and we don, t have proper railroads. The ones we do have don, t have the best safety records.

What about the water table? We are being poisioned by gasoline additives and etc. already. Nevada and California are noted for their earthquakes. Even if the mountain were shored up up it would pollute from below. Never mind (god forbid) a case of sabbotoge.

Property values and tourism would be effected as well. Who in their right minds would want to live close by bever mind visit. Nevadans and downwinders are still suffering the effects of the Atom bomb testing of the fiftys. The government said that was safe, we now know better.

Leave the waste where it is produced. It would have to travel great distances to Yucca Mt. through both densly and sparsely populated areas but mostly effecting Las Vegas and surrounding areas. No amount of money would be worth the risk of personal harm to the residents along the way. I live in a depersed area so I know what it is to do without money, but no money and no health would be unthinkable. Please reconsider.

Sincerely,
